
Australian and New Zealand Standard Industrial Classification (ANZSIC06)

October 2004

Overview of Presentation

● Progress

- Objectives, conceptual framework
- International comparability
- Inputs to ISIC Rev.4
- Future work

● Divergences between ANZSIC06 and ISIC Rev.4

- Economic differences
- Conceptual differences
- Specific services industries

Objectives, conceptual framework principles

● Objectives

- New, emerging industries
- New materials, technologies, production techniques

● Framework

- Consistent supply-side conceptual basis

● Principles

- Real world recognised
- Specific rules for complex activities
- Economic significance criteria
- International comparability

International comparability

● NAICS 2002

- 2 digit level aimed for (ANZSIC subdivision)
- Most contemporary industrial classification with supply side framework

● ISIC Rev. 4 – input into

- Conceptual framework paper
- Increased use of supply side conceptual basis for new industry categories
- Retreat from using institutional sector concept for Public Admin activities
- Divisional structure
- Details of structure
- Progress on treatment of outsourcing (commission manufacturing)

● Future?

- Support tools – concordances
- Implementation plans

Divergence of ANZSIC, ISIC Rev.4

- Economic differences

- User needs in Australia, New Zealand
- Statistically balanced

- Conceptual differences

- Supply-side vs mixed supply- and demand-side
- Continuity with previous

- Where are ANZSIC not comparable with ISIC?

Divergence: Division level

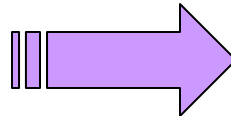

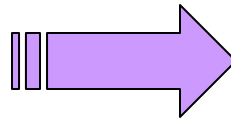

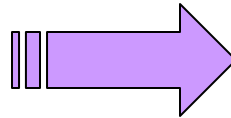

ANZSIC:

Wholesale trade

Retail trade

Information, media & telecommunications

Other services

ISIC:

Trade

Information & communication

Other service activities

Activities of households as employers...

Extraterritorial organizations & bodies

Divergence: class level

ANZSIC:

‘S’:

Other services

ISIC:

‘C’

Manufacturing

‘M’:

Professional, scientific,
technical services

‘K’:

Information & communication

Questions ?